Having trouble deciding what type of paper to use?
Let Panaprint help!

Because we deal with paper all the time, we are familiar with what is available and can guide you in your decision.

Paper, in most cases, is a generic substance. If you specify it by grade (for example, 60 lb. #3 gloss) rather than brand name, you can save money.

Most printers offer “house papers,” meaning this is something they buy in large quantities and keep in inventory. This enables them to get the lowest prices, and your print job doesn’t have to wait for a special order of paper to arrive. They will also have good experience with their “house papers,” such as knowing which inks work best and how well it folds.

Panaprint buys its house papers in truckload lots shipped directly from the mill to save you even more. All of our papers are first line papers – no seconds or mill ends. We can accommodate special paper requests, but your project could be delayed and additional setup and handling fees will apply.

Panaprint can suggest several house paper options that will fit within your budget.

We intend to offer you the highest value product at the lowest price. Please ask your sales or customer service representative for more information and for samples of our paper.
